CSMC
Critical Studies in Mass Communication

Index to Volume 16

Articles

Abel, Marco. Fargo: The violent production of the masochistic contract as a cinematic concept, 308–328.

Anten, Todd. See Hall, Alice.

Bellon, Joe. The strange discourse of The X-Files: What it is, what it does, and what is at stake, 136–154.

Cakim, Idil. See Hall, Alice.

Cooper, Brenda. The relevancy and gender identity in spectator's interpretations of Thelma & Louise, 20–41.

Danner, Lauren, & Walsh, Susan. "Radical" feminists and "Bickering" women: Backlash in U. S. media coverage of the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, 63–84.

Fishman, Jessica M. The populace and the police: Models of social control in reality-based crime television, 268–288.

Grabe, Maria Elizabeth. Television news magazine crime stories: A functionalist perspective, 155–171.

Haiman, Franklyn S. The voices of extremism revisited, 119–135.

Halkias, Alexandra. From social butterfly to modern-day Medea: Elizabeth Broderick's portrayal in the press, 289–307.

Hall, Alice, Anten, Todd, & Cakin, Idil. Perceived typicality: American television as seen by Mexicans, Turks, and Americans, 436–455.

Henderson, Lisa. Storyline and the multicultural middlebrow: Reading women's culture on National Public Radio, 329–349.

Johnson, Melissa A. Pre-television stereotypes: Mexicans in newsreels, 1919–1932, 417–435.

Kraidy, Marwan M. The global, the local, and the hybrid: Native ethnography of glocalization, 456–476.

Lewis, Justin. Reproducing political hegemony in the United States, 251–267.

Madison, Kelly. Legitimation crisis and containment: The "Anti-Racist-White-Hero" film, 399–416.

Sender, Katherine. Selling sexual subjectives: Audiences respond to gay window advertising, 172–196.

Swan, Susan Z. Gothic drama in Disney's Beauty and the Beast: Subverting traditional romance by transcending the animal-human paradox, 350–369.

Triece, Mary E. The practial true woman: Reconciling women and work in popular mail-order magazines, 1900–1920, 42–62.

Varan, Duane. The dynamics of dependency: A Polynesian encounter with television, 197–225.

Walsh, Susan. See Danner, Lauren.

Warnick, Barbara. Masculinizing the feminine: Inviting women on-line ca. 1997, 1–19.

Reviews and Criticism

Allen, Mike. The role of meta-analysis for connecting critical and scientific approaches: The need to develop a sense of collaboration, 373–379.

Copyright 1999, NCA

CSMC
Critical Studies in Mass Communication

Index to Volume 16

Articles

Abel, Marco. Fargo: The violent production of the masochistic contract as a cinematic concept, 308–328.

Anten, Todd. See Hall, Alice.

Bellon, Joe. The strange discourse of The X-Files: What it is, what it does, and what is at stake, 136–154.

Cakim, Idil. See Hall, Alice.

Cooper, Brenda. The relevancy and gender identity in spectator's interpretations of Thelma & Louise, 20–41.

Danner, Lauren, & Walsh, Susan. "Radical" feminists and "Bickering" women: Backlash in U. S. media coverage of the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, 63–84.

Fishman, Jessica M. The populace and the police: Models of social control in reality-based crime television, 268–288.

Grabe, Maria Elizabeth. Television news magazine crime stories: A functionalist perspective, 155–171.

Haiman, Franklyn S. The voices of extremism revisited, 119–135.

Halkias, Alexandra. From social butterfly to modern-day Medea: Elizabeth Broderick's portrayal in the press, 289–307.

Hall, Alice, Anten, Todd, & Cakin, Idil. Perceived typicality: American television as seen by Mexicans, Turks, and Americans, 436–455.

Henderson, Lisa. Storyline and the multicultural middlebrow: Reading women's culture on National Public Radio, 329–349.

Johnson, Melissa A. Pre-television stereotypes: Mexicans in newsreels, 1919–1932, 417–435.

Kraidy, Marwan M. The global, the local, and the hybrid: Native ethnography of glocalization, 456–476.

Lewis, Justin. Reproducing political hegemony in the United States, 251–267.

Madison, Kelly. Legitimation crisis and containment: The "Anti-Racist-White-Hero" film, 399–416.

Sender, Katherine. Selling sexual subjectives: Audiences respond to gay window advertising, 172–196.

Swan, Susan Z. Gothic drama in Disney's Beauty and the Beast: Subverting traditional romance by transcending the animal-human paradox, 350–369.

Triece, Mary E. The practial true woman: Reconciling women and work in popular mail-order magazines, 1900–1920, 42–62.

Varan, Duane. The dynamics of dependency: A Polynesian encounter with television, 197–225.

Walsh, Susan. See Danner, Lauren.

Warnick, Barbara. Masculinizing the feminine: Inviting women on-line ca. 1997, 1–19.

Reviews and Criticism

Allen, Mike. The role of meta-analysis for connecting critical and scientific approaches: The need to develop a sense of collaboration, 373–379.

Copyright 1999, NCA

Barak, Gregg. Reflexive newsmaking and representation, 480–482.

Deem, Melissa. Scandal, heteronormative culture, and the disciplining of feminism, 86–93.

Elasmar, Michael G. Opportunities and challanges of using meta-analysis in the field of international communication, 379–385.

Gray, Herman. A different dream of difference, 484–488.

Gonzalez, Jorge A. Dark side of the fractal moon communication studies in Latin America: Challenging destiny and confronting complexity, 227–232.

Hogeland, Lisa Maria. Feminism, sex scandals, and historical lessons, 94–99.

Lozano, Elizabeth. A multi-faceted moon: A response to "Dark side of the fractal moon . . ." 237–241.

McPhail, Mark. (Re)reading resistance at the end of the twentieth century, 477–480.

McPhail, Mark. Resigning the opposition: Re-contructing resistance at the edge of the West, 488–491.

Schroll, Chris. The place of conversation in the omnilogue of democracy: A reply to Schudson, 99–106.

Schudson, Michael. Reply to Chris Schroll, 107.

Shanahan, James. Meta-analysis and mass communication criticism, 370–373.

Valdivia, Angharad. La vida es loca Latina/o, 482–484.

Vargas, Lucila. Response to Jorge Gonzalez's "Dark side of the fractal moon . . ." 232–237.

Book Reviews

Bertelsen, Dale A. Soap operas and feminist criticism [Review of the book Screen tastes: Soap opera to satellite dishes by Charlotte Brundson], 109–110.

Brookey, Robert Alan. BODY Talk: Viewing mediated images [Review of the book Body talk: Philosphical reflections on sex and gender by Jacquelyn N. Zita], 386–387.

Brooks, Dwight E. Media representations of difference: From texts to contents.[Review of the book Representing 'race': Idealogy, identity and the media by Robert Ferguson], 494–496.

Cloud, Dana L. Talk shows as political venues? [Review of the book The talking cure: TV talk shows and women by Jane Shattuc], 110–112.

Delgado, Fernando P. Cultural borders [Review of the book Border matters: Remapping American cultural studies by Jose David Saldivar], 243–244.

Haynes, W. Lance. On meeting a writer: My encounter with Sven Birkerts' readings [Review of the book Readings by Sven Birkerts], 387–389.

Ott, Brian L. Technology and cultural form [Review of the book Virtualities: Television, media art, and cyberculture by Margaret Moise], 244–246.

Watts, Eric King. Assessing the revolution of black television [Review of the book Color by Fox: The Fox network and the revolution in black television by Kristal Brent Zook], 493–494.

Special Thanks

The editors of CSMC would like to thank all the contributors, and Associate and Counsulting Editors for all their hard work and dedication which made Volume 16 of CSMC such a success. Thank you for a successful year.